CAIRO — Egypt became the first Arab country to signal its sup-port for the recent U.S Middle East peace initiative Sunday as Secretary of State George P. Brazil Agrees To Pay Interest

WASHINGTON (WP) Brazil, which halted $70 million in interest to its banks a year ago, agreed Sunday to make a $700 million interest payment that will clear up its overdue obligations for 1988.

The move came as part of an accord in which Brazil's bank creditors pledged to lend the nation $5.8 billion toward a medium-term financial package, at the same relatively favorable interest-rate terms that Mexico and some other debtor nations have received.

WASHINGTON — Reagan administration officials who analyze political and economic trends in Eastern Europe say they believe three of the six Warsaw Pact countries face domestic instability, mainly as a result of deterioration mal Herald Tribune PARIS - If Western Europe is to stand up to the bracing economic challenges of the late 20th century, it must muster the political courage to break out of the shackles it has placed on its own growth over the past two decades. In the process, governments will have to confront cozy assumptions by large numbers of voters about and living standards.

That is the message that is being voiced with increasing urgency by a growing number of economists and international officials as the West struggles to regain its balance after the economic and financial upheavals of the past five months. The theme is by no means new. The free-enterprise Reagan administration has for years been urging an end to the restrictive social, labor and industrial practices that it says distort market forces and feather-bed inefficiency in the European economies.

Now, however, the cause is being taken up by Jean-Claude Paye, secretary-general of the Paris-based Organization for Economic Cooperation and Development, who hopes to mount a concerted intergovernmental drive to tackle the problem in the months ahead.

'Europe has resources for don't exist anymore," said John growth that could be much better

Washington Post Service
WASHINGTON — For the hypochondriac, every little twinge forecasts imminent demise. That dull ache just behind the eyes — could it be a brain tumor? Those funny tingles - multiple scierosis? A sudden shortness of breath — doubtless a heart attack in the making. Hypochondriacs scan their bodies like a prison guard: Every organ, every cell is on the verge of

Q. Have the United States and West Germany made a deal for the NATO summit on the issue of modernizing nuclear weapons in Europe?

A. It's a deal to postpone public discussion, not a deal to postpone decisions. West German opinion is being told that something has changed because NATO admits that Lance missiles do not need to be replaced before 1995. But that means deployment, not development decisions. There is a difference between the interpretations being given U.S. public opinion and West German opinion.

the alliance, but the alliance can't impose modernization on us.

Q. Do you feel that the Reagan administration is trying to impose nuclear decisions on West Germany? A. Britain is worse in this respect than the United States. I'm puzzled by why Mrs. Thatcher is doing it. Her approach seems counter-productive. She's criticizing Franco-German cooperation, but France's participation in the summit is a positive signal, showing that Franco-German cooperation need not split the alliance but instead can lead France closer to NATO.

Q. On disarmament, most NATO nations want talks about battlefield nuclear weapons to come last in a sequence of arms-control talks, after negotiations on conventional forces and chemical weapons have cut Soviet superiority. What do you should start in parallel with the other negotiations and their outcome should not be contingent on them. The outcome should give very low ceilings, no more new weapons than the 88 Lance missiles deployed

Q. You talk about accepting 88 new short-range missiles. Hasn't the Social Democratic Party already upset allied govemments by advocating "triple zero," cutting these missiles to zero like the two classes of missiles in the INF Treaty?

A. A consensus is emerging in West Germany, but not on the triple zero. My party endorsed the triple zero, but without a consensus on it. Some politicians use the third-zero rhetoric because we don't want a situation of no progress and an unrestricted arms race. But realistically we know the difference between an ideal outcome and a

Q. Do you believe that West Germany is exposed to "singularity" in nuclear risk?
A. Only partially. Norway and the Benelux countries are within range of the same Soviet missiles worrying us, so it's only a semi-truth. I personally am reluctant to use the argument, but it can be exploited, even by people who don't believe it, to work for triple zero.

A. West Germans believe that talks on nuclear war in Europe after the INF Treaty these very short-range nuclear systems removed intermediate-range missiles the way the peace movement feared it when the missiles were being deployed. The peace movement thought deployment coupled the alliance too rightly; the right fears arms control will decouple West Germany. There are psychological dimensions here. these anxieties are undermining the ratio-nality of the security debate. The result is that both the right wing and the left wing in West Germany are pressing in the direction of nuclear disarmament.

Q. How can NATO reassure the West

A. Look at the example of a chemicalweapons treaty. Many people in West Germany, in all parties, believe that the United States and France are reluctant about an accord because a worldwide ban would be hard to verify absolutely. But a ban can be sufficiently verified in Europe, so let us get a worldwide treaty, even with some verification risks. Otherwise discussion will revive about a chemical-weapons-free zone in Europe

Now the Kohl government is telling us that the United States will withdraw its old chemical stocks from West Germany by 1992 and that West Germany would have a veto on deployment of any new binary arms in our country. But Congress seems to be getting a different impression. It's another example of those misunderstandings and maybe misrepresentations which we can't live with any more in the alliance.

for Strategic and International Studies has released a bipartisan report warning that political cohesion of the NATO alliance will be a major problem for the next administration, regardless of who is elected president.

As a result of the U.S.-Soviet treaty eliminating intermediate-range nuclear missiles from Eu-rope, the report said, many Europe-ans are questioning the credibility of the U.S. commitment to the North Atlantic Treaty Organiza-

While the report does not critique the missile treaty, it says the next president must reassure the allies of U.S. support. First, it said, he must reassert the policy of flexible response while working to enhance the nonnuclear military capabilities of the alliance.

Flexible response has been the mainstay of NATO strategy since the 1960s. The strategy seeks to deter a Warsaw Pact attack by maintaining strong forces at each level of potential escalation up to nuclear weapons and by being willing to use whatever level of force is needed to repel an attack. Some critics of the new missile treaty say they believe the agreement has re-moved a rung of the NATO escalatory ladder.

The report, issued last week is the work of experts from government and the private sector and was headed by Representative Dennis Mive Hertel, Democrat of Michigan; Representative Thomas J. Ridge, Republican of Pennsylva-nia; and William J. Taylor Jr., vice president at the Center for Strategic and International Studies. The center, a Washington-based insti-tution whose studies normally support a strong defense, sponsored the report, titled "National Security Choices for the Next President." BATON ROUGE, Louisiana Pat Robertson, the Republican presidential candidate and television evangelist, says he believes that God has forgiven the Reverend Jimmy Swaggart for his confessed sin of moral failure. He said he hoped to see his fellow preacher back in his broadcast pulpit soon.

Mr. Robertson interrupted a campaign flight from Houston to Huntsville, Alabama, to express his support for Mr. Swaggart, who endorsed his presidential candidacy a year ago.
"Jimmy has confessed to a moral problem and asked for forgiveness," Mr. Robertson said at a news conference. "And I believe that God has forgiven him." Mr. Swaggart leads a worldwide ministry with an annual income of about $140 million a year. He stepped down from his pulpit a week ago amid published reports that he had paid a prostitute to perform obscene acts. Mr. Swaggart admitted to an un-

Mr. Robertson said Saturday

"I expressed my love for him, and my support for him," Mr. Robertson said. "I told him I want to see him soon restored to his pulpit, and to continue again his magnifi-cent work of caring for the poor and needy."

A Deadly New Turn Lends Moral In N.Y. Drug War

was shot three times in the head with a high-caliber weapon as he sat in a patrol car at 3:30 A.M. Friday near the home of the man who had complained about sales of narcotics

The New York police commis-sioner, Benjamin Ward, called the killing "an attempt to intimidate not just that witness," but all who cooperate with the police in battling narcotics.

The killing seemed to illustrate just how far the drug dealers would go to protect themselves - that the dealers, in the words of Mr. Johnson, were trying to send a message to residents and to the police that "we're in control."

Officers at the scene of the murder spoke Saturday of a heightened sense of fear and anger at the latest turn in a complex and bitter war involving drug dealers battling over turf, residents trying to preserve their neighborhoods and officers trying to clean up the area.

Police spokesmen would give few details about their progress in the case. However, one high-ranking police official said that at least 14 persons had been arrested on narcotics charges since the killing.

More and more of the 800,000 lawyers in the United States are attending lectures and workshops on writing more clearly. Joel Herming, a Chicago lawyer, says one reason for the heightened interest is that clients have become more demanding.

Mayor Edward L Koch of New York is trying to lose weight again, this time by suffering through what he calls the "swill diet." Mr. Koch said the diet, which he is following under the supervision of a doctor, consists of two powders mixed with water. "It works," he said, claiming he had lost four pounds (1.8 kilograms) in four days. "I call it the swill diet," he said, "because it's swill. They tell you it tastes good. It doesn't taste bad, but you can't say it tastes good."

Why Girls' Schools Are Still Necessary

Notwithstanding the growing predominance of coeducation, Rachel Phillips Belash, head of Miss Porter's School in New York, writes in a New York Times article that girls' schools "are a fail-safe producer of firstclass citizenship for girls in a world in which they are not guaranteed this opportunity elsewhere. A student in a girls-only school, Ms. Belash says, "won't have to elbow her way to the computer terminals or perhaps feel out of place spending extra time in the physics lab. "Her voice will be heard in class, her opinion sought - on every topic - and taken seriously. Whatever the athletic facilities, they are for her alone. Moreover, leadership roles are more available: Girls get experience in managing radio stations, editing student newspapers and literary magazines, heading the debate and mathematics teams - all without having to fight for a place in the sun, because sex sterectyping does not complicate life in the school."

The sight of shantytowns collapsing on the hillsides during the rain, moreover, has set off a new round in the perennial debate on what to do about the slums.

The debate, pitting rich against poor, appears to focus not on the magnitude of the poverty or its possible remedies, but on its dangers and unsightliness. Great clusters of shacks have encroached on the slopes near the elegant beach district and downtown business center, overlooking mansions, apart-ments and hotels.

As the slum dwellers have built shacks higher up the mountain and cut more trees, the soil has become increasingly vulnerable to land-slides. A Success and a Failure American interests are in a foreign country and how much influence the United States can have over that country's policies. President Reagan last week demonstrated reasonable success in his calculations concerning South Korea — and ugly failure in his miscalculations concerning South Africa. South Korea took another step toward democracy, inaugurating a president elected in a relatively free and fair vote. Washington has had influence in the process and used it constructively.

South Africa moved sharply backward. It banned the activities of the leading antiapartheid organizations, cutting off virtually all nonviolent means of protest. In this case, America has negligible influence. Yet it has deluded itself with its policy of "constructive engagement." Now it succeeds only in tying itself more closely to the oppressors in Pretoria. There is a powerful message here for future U.S. policy makers. Roh Tae Woo became president on Thursday in South Korea's first recent peaceful transfer of power. In his inaugural address he said he would listen to opponents as well as to supporters, and he took a step in that direction with an amnesty for dissidents and labor activists. To be sure, he will have to face parliamentary elections in April, and he still has a lot to prove. But there is a good chance that the country might have veered toward more dictatorial rule were it not for the efforts of

Every U.S. president has to decide what key State Department officials. At several critical moments last year they made clear to South Korean military leaders that inter-vention in politics would damage relations with America. Given America's critical importance in dealing with North Korea, the military wisely heeded the warning. That makes clear the contrast with South Africa. Its white leaders need little from the United States. The Carter administration recognized that and kept its distance from Pretoria. Carter policy at least made clear U.S. opposition to apartheid and support for democracy. Reagan administration officials fell into the trap of thinking that they could develop a common anti-Communist interest with Pretoria. They would work together to get Cuban troops out of Angola, and that would somehow make Pretoria more amenable to America's anti-apartheid promptings. The important thing the administration reckoned, was not to scold Pretoria publicly.

Pretoria's officials milked this hard-line naïveté. Last week they showed how much they care about even the illusion of democracy. They told South Africans, black and white, who would seek peaceful change to forget about it. President Reagan made it all worse by saying in his news conference that the problem was not Pretoria's intransigent racism but "tribal policy." Such folly, like the larger delusion of "constructive engagement," will impose a destructive price on future administrations.

How to Combat AIDS

Through the fog of fear and ignorance, the AIDS epidemic in America is taking clearer shape. The Reagan administration still has not seized the opportunity to fight either the fear or the epidemic. But the study commission that President Reagan appointed under retired Admiral James Watkins is making remarkable strides. Last week Admiral Watkins recognized the crux of the issue by proposing a $2 billion campaign against AIDS among drug addicts.

AIDS is a critical event of Mr. Reagan's term. Yet his administration first ignored it, then played on fear of AIDS to preach sexual pieties — and then fell silent when the threatened devastation failed to appear. Leadership might have saved many from infection had the administration earlier understood and acted on two central facts that have been evident for many months:

• In America the virus is not yet spreading beyond the risk groups. So far, at least, transmission by heterosexual intercourse in the population at large is the wrong target.

• Addicts form the main reservoir for the spread of AIDS. It is among them that the battle against AIDS must be fought.

The agent of AIDS, human immunodeficiency virus or HIV, is spread primarily by semen in anal intercourse and by the bloodtainted needles shared by drug addicts. It moves, in so-called secondary transmission, from addicts and bisexual men to their heterosexual partners. Tertiary transmission - via heterosexual intercourse between these groups and others — is not yet happening in America. "You have to assume that tertiary spread will occur, but the which it has occurred is remarkably small," observes Dr. Harold Jaffe, chief epidemiologist at the Centers for Disease Control.

Evidence for that comes from extensive testing among blood donors, military recruits and active military personnel. Almost nine out of 10 of those found to carry the virus admit on careful interview to being gay, addicted or partners of people who are. Among those attending sexual-disease clinics - presumably at highest risk for tertiary

No one knows why tertiary transmission is not occurring in America. Many experts believe that heterosexual spread is the chief cause of the alarming prevalence in certain African cities. The frequency there of other sexual diseases, which break the skin and admit the virus to the bloodstream, may be what makes urban Africa special. In rural Zaire the prevalence of HIV has long remained under I percent.

A year ago, on the basis of no clear evidence, Dr. Oits Bowen, the secretary of Health and Human Services, warned that HIV was "rapidly spreading" and would make the Black Death seem "pale by com-parison." Last month he conceded that "we do not expect any explosion into the hetero-sexual population." Whatever the reason, year after year, HIV in America has so far stayed in the known risk groups. This present confinement of HIV offers a precious chance to halt the virus in its tracks.

The rate of new infections among homosexuals is now declining, gay men have learned to protect themselves. But the virus continues its horrifying spread among addicts. Among New York City's estimated 200,000 addicts, half are already infected and some 10,000 more acquire the virus each year.

They spread a tide of destruction to their partners and newborn children. That creates a growing reservoir of infected heterosexuals from whom tertiary transmission could start.

This is a transmission path that society can do something about. Providing treatment on demand for all addicts should be an essential part of anti-AIDS strategy, as Admiral Watso eagerly spouted pieties about sex, has done precious little about AIDS and drugs. Instead it has fostered the epidemic of fear by implying that everyone is at equal risk. In five months, Admiral Watkins has learned what the administration failed to grasp in five years. The urgent need is to stop crying wolf about tertiary transmission and to deal instantly with transmission among drug addicts — the wolf that is at the door.

Drug Capital of America

If anybody still wonders why cold-blooded murders of men, women and children are forts must be tailored to specific abuses. becoming a daily part of life in the Washing-ton area, or what might be contributing to more static, older segment of abusers who increases in crime and the incidence of AIDS, the one-word answer now comes with new authority and frightening pervasiveness: drugs. The problems have reached epidemic AIDS. But the fast growing groups are those proportions, according to a Rand Corpora-using PCP and crack cocame. Among the 26 tion report — from the poorest inner-city blocks to the tidy subdivisions and rolling hills of suburban Maryland and Virginia.

The message, underscored by comprehensive statistics distilled from heretofore uncoordinated data around the region, is that the depth of drug abuse throughout this metropolitan area is unmatched. Edward F. Mitchell, president of Potomac Electric Power Company and chairman of a private-sector task force that commissioned this report, describes the dimensions: "It is not an innercity problem. It is truly a regional problem. It is not a problem that is bounded by race, age, profession or income level. It affects every segment of our society and our community."

While none of this is likely to startle law enforcement authorities or those involved in drug treatment in the region, the preview-summary just released and the full report to come in April make some important distinctions about the nature of drug abuse, the responses so far and the options to be considered in the future. Peter Reuter, chief author, notes that the study is not intended to present a "policy prescription," but it does offer the federal and regional governments a detailed description of how commit crimes to cover the costs of their unrelenting addictions; and as needle users they are major contributors to the spread of largest metropolitan areas in the United States besides New York, the Washington region ranked first in PCP- and heroin-related deaths and third behind Boston and Miami in deaths related to cocaine.

Treatments - and results - vary for each drug. And while law enforcement efforts may be temporarily successful in clearing out a neighborhood market, there has been no decline in use. At the same time, relatively little money has been concentrated on pre-vention, which the study's authors suggest may provide the best hope for success.

The leaders of every government in the Washington region should get together to create continuing prevention programs — now. Mr. Reuter emphasizes that while "no effort is going to cut rates of drug abuse by 50 percent in five years," approaches using enforcement, treatment, peer pressures and other prevention efforts can make a difference. If people everywhere in the Washington region will now recognize that drugs are in their neighborhoods and in the culture of their friends, the degree of concern and commitment may rise to a point where something can be done. - THE WASHINGTON POST.

Cyprus: The Days of Partition May Be Numbered

By A. R. Norton

W EST POINT, New York — Moments of diplomatic oppor-tunity are difficult to create, and when they do occur they are often the result of unexpected developments that would have seemed implausible only a few weeks before.

Just such a moment seems to have emerged in Cyprus, which has been divided by conflict for 14 years. A warming trend in Greek-Turkish relations has been complemented by some positive signs, capped by the election on Feb. 21 of a political newcomer, George V. Vassiliou, as president of the Republic of Cyprus. Cyprus has been partitioned since the Greek-sponsored coup of 1974, which succeeded only in precipitating a Turkish invasion. By 1975, some 70,000 Turkish and 200,000 Greek Cypriots representing one-third of the Cypriots, representing one-third of the population, were relocated across the green line manned by a United Na-tions force. The result was an island split into two homogenous enclaves --the Republic of Cyprus, which is al-most entirely Greek, and the Turkish Republic of Northern Cyprus. Hu-manitarian and financial claims resulting from the tragedy complicate the diplomatic search for a formula to reunify the island. About 1,600 Greek and 800 Turkish Cypriots are still listed as missing, and their fate is a major source of dispute.

Although they account for only 18 percent of the population, Turkish Cypnots now course 37 percent of the territory as a result of the presented the territory as a result of the presented the territory as a result of the presented the prese ence of about 30,000 Turkish troops. The Cyprus dispute has been further complicated by the arrival of as many as 60,000 settlers from the Turkish mainland, which threatens to further entrench Turkish influence.

After years of living as a disadvan-taged minority in a state dominated politically and economically by Greek Cypriots, Turkish Cypriots are willing to endure diplomatic isolation rather than resume their junior role. Led by the veteran politician Rauf Denktash, Turkish Cypriots have resisted any settlement that does not grant them a real measure of autonomy. Their fear is living in a Hellenized Cyprus.
Yet recently, in the weeks following the surprisingly cordial meeting of Prime Ministers Turgut Ozal of Turkey and Andreas Persanders of

Turkey and Andreas Papandreou of Greece, Mr. Denktash's rhetoric seems to have mellowed. Instead of insisting on dividing Cyprus into two virtually sovereign states, Mr. Denktash has rejuvenated the idea of a federal state headed by a sovereign central government. For the first time since the collapse of United Nationssponsored negotiations in 1986, the two sides have something to discass.

Mr. Vassilion, the president-elect, received 52 percent of the Greek Cypciot vote. Much of his support came from the left, especially the Communist Party, which accounted for about 60 percent of his votes. However, Mr. Vassiliou emphasizes that he long ago made a "negative decision" not to be involved with the party, which his parents helped to found. Despite his appeal to the left, his electoral platform resembled that of his opponent, Glafkos Clerides. Both candidates were remarkably realistic in asserting that the Greek Cypriots must show more flexibility

if the partition is to be ended. Mr. Vassilion, a successful businessman, knows that success in reunifying Cyprus may end his political career. He does not believe that a full settlement is achievable unless Tur-key is brought into the negotiations. It is widely thought that Mr. Denk-tash will follow the Turkish lead. One of the most emotive issues for Greek Cypriots is a demand that they be allowed to return to their homes. The position of the presi-dent-elect on this is pragmatic: The right of return must be recognized in principle, but in a federated state there is little likelihood that many

Greek Cypriots would exercise it. That Mr. Vassilion can adopt such a stance is due largely to the compassionate response of the Republic of Cyprus, in 1975, to the predicament of the Greek Cypriot refugees. Rather than isolating them in camps, thereby fomenting anger and keeping the issue of return boiling, the government of the control of the c ernment did everything possible to integrate them into society. That humane response may now enable the new president to gain a solution that would otherwise be impossible.

The writer, associate professor of comparative politics at the U.S. Military Academy, is preparing a book on Cypriot politics. He contributed this comment to The New York Times.

But it's too late, we've got used to the idea of independence and we must assert it." Contrary to what some in Washington suggest, the treaty returning the canal and promising withdrawal of U.S. troops (now 10,000) by 1999, signed by President Carter, has strengthened the U.S. position. Otherwise General Noriega could count on more support not only from his countrymen but also from Latin America and the world in general. His claim that the United States is conspiring to get out of the treaty now sounds like the whine it is.

General Fred Woerner, head of the U.S. Southern Command here, speaks of the wisdom of the treaty in having corrected the "anachronism" of U.S. sovereignty in the former Canal Zone. He is calm and confident that the crisis can be overcome without force. Much of this crisis is the indirect and direct result of Washington's obsession with the Sandinists, and of the hankypanky played to avoid the fact that it never rallied domestic support for a clear policy on Nicaragua. Such things have more insidious costs than the em-barrassment of the Iran contra hear-ings. One is the situation in Panama.

General Noriega has achieved one remarkable feat, though. He has unit-ed people in Washington who never agree on anything else but now agree that he must go. Sooner or later he will have to. He seems to think that if he can hold out until U.S. elections, he can re-establish happy collusion with the next administration. He is wrong. His glory days are numbered.

100 YEARS AGO 1888: Hope for Stanley

VIENNA — Dr. Oscar Lenz, the Austrian explorer, who crossed the African Continent last year, states in a letter to the Allgemeine Zeining that he has every confidence that Mr. H.M. Moreover, Mr. Stanley's knowledge of the country is his best safeguard, and the worst that Dr. Lenz thinks may have befallen himse, a difficulty in finding sufficient food to feed his large party of 600 persons.

Romania: Instead a Most Unfavored Police State

WASHINGTON — Life for the people of Romania is deteriorating daily under the repressive regime of Nicolae Ceauseson. Riots in Brasov and student demonstrations in Bucharesi have taken place to protest repression and human rights abuses. Food and fuel shortages ravage the land. Churches are destroyed, dissidents disappear and Mr. Ceausescu is building a pal-ace-like monument cum boulevard to himself ironically called "The Victory of Socialism." In soite of the conditions that the Romanian people live under, the government of the United States has continued to grant Romania most favored nation status as a trading partner.

Romania received MFN status in 1975. The State Department felt that Romania's role as a maverick in Eastern Europe, its ties to Israel and its condemnation of the Soviet invasion of Czechoslovakia in 1968 merited MFN status. Mr. Ceausescu was lauded as a "new" type of Communist-bloc leader who could be weaned away from the influence of the Soviet Union.

I visited Romania in 1985 because of stories about Mr. Ceausescu's egregious human rights record. U.S. congressional concern culminated in bipartisan legislation that some of my House and Senate colleagues and I introduced last year to temporarily suspend Romania's MFN status. Amendments, passed by both the House and the Senate and attached to the omnibus ed after his recent trip to Romania that no exit permits had been issued since Oct. 31, 1987. Even trade bill, are now being considered by a con-ference committee. The administration, however, has the prerogative to extend MFN status each year. Romania's MFN status was extended for another year on June 2, 1987.

Congress went on record nearly a year ago condemning Romania's human rights record, but the Ceausescu regime has continued its abuses and now, by "renouncing" MFN status, in effect challenges Washington to terminate it. I recently returned to Romania and found that the human rights situation had turned worse. Churches and synagogues continue to be bull-dozed and people are harassed for their religious beliefs. Romania has allowed ethnic Germans and Jews to emigrate, but press reports say that those who receive exit permits have to pay between $2,500 and $5,000. The fee is covered by the receiving country, in many cases West Germany or Israel. No matter what emigration record Romania has possessed in previous years, Deputy Secretary of State John Whitehead stated after his recent trip to Romania that no exit Soviet General Secretary Mikhail Gorbachev has spoken out. On his 1986 visit to Romania he said, "Even if you told me that everything was all ... I would not believe you.

Mr. Gorbachev's comments preceded demonstrations on Feb. 1, called for by the Czech group Charter 77, in Poland, Hungary, Czechoslovakia and the Soviet Union. Demonstrators turned off lights, turned down heat and marched in front of Romanian embassies. If the people of Eastern Europe recognize the nature of Mr. Ceausescu's rule, how can the United States continue to subsi-dize his regime with preferential MFN status?

A human rights situation similar to that in Romania today existed in 1982 in Poland. President Reagan suspended Poland's preferential U.S. trading status in light of the repression of Solidarity and the institution of martial law. As he did with regard to Poland, he can join with Congress by temporarily suspending MFN sta-ms by executive order or by refusing to extend Romania's MFN status for another year when the renewal time comes this summer.

There are 23 million people in Romania who receive little or no benefit from the MFN status that their country enjoys with the United States, and who daily endure economic, physical and spiritual hardships from the regime of Nicolae usescu. They do not deserve to be forgotten.

Washington Ought to Bridle the Fed and Grow Up

WASHINGTON — The popular version of the American political economy in the 1980s describes a moral drama in which the good guys won. The politicians, it is said, were wildly irresponsible with fiscal policy, but Paul Volcker and the Federal Reserve saved America from ruin.

It is curious that a similar version of events became the conventional wisdom during the 1970s —only then the stern-willed chairman who saved the country from the reckless politicians was Arthur Burns. Before Mr. Burns, it was William McChesney Martin.

This makes for a satisfying melodrama — the central bank as fearless dragon slayer - but there is obviously something wrong with the story. If Mr. Martin licked inflation with the recession of 1969-70, then why did Mr. Burns have to repeat the feat with a much worse contraction a few years later? And if Mr. Burns tri-umphed, why did Mr. Volcker im-pose on this decade the harshest recession since the Depression? What is wrong, of course, is that inflation did not go away after any of these supposed triumphs, nor did the over-ambitious spending of the federal government. Each time price inflation received, it reached a harrowing new level. And each time it was answered with even harsher discipline from the central bank.

In my book on the Federal Reserve, I suggest that a different sort of goveming drama has been played out in the last 20 years - a repetitious and pathological conflict in which there are no heroes but many losers. In rough terms, the separate power centers of government - the president and Congress - which make fiscal policy, and the central bank, which makes monetary policy, have been fighting for control of the economy. By William Greider excesses on the upside, increasing severity from monetary discipline on the downside. The driving force is political, not the scientific presumptions of economics. The fiscal policy makers push forward wishfully, making commitments that they cannot fulfill, until a time when the popular discontent with inflation has accumulated sufficiently to allow the Federal Reserve to seize control. Once the monetary policy makers

This cycle of combat is producing ognizing the extreme behavior on the extremes on both sides—larger fiscal side, but the crucial point to grasp is that the Federal Reserve, in its own way, also behaves irresponsibly. During the 1980s, whenever the Federal Reserve erred it nearly always erred on the side of hard money sacrificing the real economy in order to protect prices.

Politically, it is easy enough to un-derstand the Federal Reserve's behavior. The institution's own good name was being challenged and there was little incentive for moderation. But in economic terms the results have been devastating like deep body wounds that are still not healed: the trade deficit flowing from a five-year rise of the dollar; the accumulation of weakened debtors both at home and abroad; the tender banking system; the deep vulnerabilities in the real economy riself.

In my view, the cycle of continuing disorder originates in the governing structure itself — the divided nature of government's management of the economy. A populist, Representative Wright Patman, called the federal government a "car with two drivers," one operating the accelerator while the other controls the brake. He was plished. Both sides — the fiscal and right, but of course he complained only about the driver with the brake. The real problem is not one side or the other but the relationship itself. struggle - sort of. Price inflation was Although both sides are manipulatgoat for popular distress. The Federal Reserve counts on the elected side of government to minister to the wounded - bail out wrecked victims like farmers and banks, and shield the Fed from the voters. That is a bizarre way to govern. In a way, the federal government re-sembles a neurotic family that obsessively repeats the same pattern of damaging behavior, unable to recognize its own pathology and unable to change. The politicians behave like errant children. The Federal Reserve plays the role of stern father administering the punishment. And both overdo it. The cycle will continue as long as the neurotic relationship rewards everyone's warped needs. The only way out of the dilemma

the way to encourage a responsible balance, is to force the elected government to take full responsibility for its action. Politicians must be forced to face the heat of having to impose. restraint through interest rates or other mechanisms. That is an oblique way of saying that the independent status of the central bank must be compromised, if not diminated,

At the least, the two levers of goverument management ought to be co-ordinated in a visible, rational way so that the results of mismatched policies are less easy to evade.

The way to make democracy behave more maturely is no different from the way in which children are compelled to grow up. The elected representatives will not act like adults until they are treated like adults and given responsibility for their own actions.

Murdani, until recently considered the second most powerful man in Indonesia after President Suharto. has been replaced as armed forces commander. The move was seen as a prelude to more government changes in the next few weeks.

General Murdani's replacement is General Tri Sutrisno, 52, army chief of staff since 1986 and in 1974-78 an aide-de-camp to the president. His appointment was announced officially Saturday.

General Sutrisno is regarded as Mr. Suharto's personal protege and possible successor. President Suharto, 66, is expected to be re-elected unopposed on March 10 to his fifth term as president of this country of about 170 million people.

The president's decision to change military commanders two weeks before forming a new administration surprised even General Murdani, 55, whose term as military chief had been extended for a year last October. On Feb. 10, General Murdani,

Sudan Now Depends on Libya for Arms

By Jonathan C. Randal

Washington Post Service KHARTOUM, Sudan — Libya has emerged as Sudan's major arms supplier less than three years after fulfilling the same function for southern-led insurgents trying to overthrow the Khartoum regime, according to diplomats and Sudanese officials.

Sudanese officials say that their country is hard-pressed and has no choice but to accept Libyan help.

But they worry that the principal goal of Colonel Moammar Gad-hafi, the Libyan leader, is to buy influence and subvert government authority in the province of North-era Darfur, which abuts the bor-ders of both Libya and Chad. That would give Colonel Gadhafi a freer hand in pursuing his war against Chad.

The Sudanese government already is struggling with lawless-ness, civil war, and a moribund economy. Its toleration of rising Libyan influence has further weakened faith in the country's ability to surmount its troubles independent-

Witt Wins the Duel Of 'Carmens,' With Manley Placing 2d

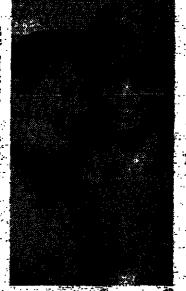

Washington Past Service
CALGARY, Alberta — Dueling Carmens" formed the centerpiece of the Olympics Saturday night, with Debi Thomas of the United States and Katarina Witt of East Germany each performing to music from the famed opera, and neither was as good as she could have been.
But Witt made the fewest mistakes, winning the women's figure skaring gold medal and defending the Olympic title she won in 1984. Thomas, skaring last, made several errors to give away a title she had every chance of getting, and took

"I'm sorry," she said as she came

Elizabeth Manley of Canada proved to be an unforeseen interloper. Skating classically and ath-letically to a risque tune from the film "Irma La Donce" and the stirring "Canadian Concerto," she got the evening's highest marks from the nine judges to win the long program, worth 50 percent of the overali score.

Manley, however, had been just third coming into the long pro-gram, and could not win the gold. "I knew I was going to do it," she

Witt, the 22-year-old world champion, skated second in the fichampion, skated second in the b-nat group of five. Looking appro-priately Spanish in red satin and black lace, she transported the ca-pacity crowd of 19,000 but did just four triple jumps, electing to turn a triple toe loop into a double. She received three marks of 5.8, four of 5.7, and two of 5.6 for technical merit. Her marks for artistry werd 130

In a black dress with red and silver flowered drippings, her vivid, triumphant routine fell apart as she missed four of her jumps, although never falling. Her Carmen received marks ranging from 5.5 to 5.7, fourth best of the evening.

"Well, back to school," she said. Witt came in knowing that a victory would make her one of the most decorated figure skaters of all 1920s and early 30s was able to repeat as Olympic champion, with three gold medals. Thomas knew this was her only Olympics, and that she could become the first black in the history of the Winter

Games to win a medal. Thomas and Witt represented contrasting styles, as well as two world champions who had made it clear they had no great fondness for each other. Thomas was thought to have the advantage athletically with her dynamic leaps, while Witt's charisms and grace seemed to make her unparalleled. Thomas chose to skate a more joyous, energetic passage that was punctuated by her five triple jumps. It began with a shaky triple toe-loop-triple-toe-loop in the first 15 seconds, a difficult combination seldom attempted by women. Witt's was a less ambitious but more evocative, balletic interpreta-tion. She, too, had planned five

Tomba, Svan Win Their 2d Olympic Golds

CALGARY, Alberta - Alberto Tomba of Italy, who had said he would tame Mount Allan as he had the slopes in Europe this winter, was all he was supposed to be.

With his second spectacular performance of the week, Tomba won the men's slalom Saturday for his second gold medal of the Winter Olympics. That feat then was matched by Gunde Svan of Sweden, who won the men's 50kilometer cross-country ski race, and Yvonne van Gennip of the Netherlands, whose Olympic record in the women's 1.500-meter speed skating competition denied a farewell gold medal for the greatest woman skater of them all, Karin Enke Kania of East Germany.

Tomba was third after Saturday's first run, trailing Frank Worndl of West Germany and Jonas Nilsson of Sweden. But starting 13th in the second leg, he snaked down the 500-meter course, leaving no margin for error as he side-swiped the gates to finish in a combined time of 1:39.47. Worndl, an 11-year veteran who won the slalom event in the world championships last season, was just a tick slower, in 1:39.53.

Nilsson slipped to sixth as the bronze medal was won by Paul Frommelt of Lichtenstein in 1:39.84. Pirmin Zurbriggen of Switzerland, the gold medalist in the downhill, finished seventh. advantage. Of his second gold medal, he said, "This is fantastic for me. Myself and only the great champions could do it."

Worndl said "it was possible to beat Tomba, but I made two little mistakes and lost my chance. At mid-course in the second run I lost my concentration through a couple of gates. No big mistake, just a loss of concentration, and I probably lost the race in that moment."

Thursday, had to share the stage a bit with one of the old favorites. Ingemar Steamark of Sweden. Stenmark, who won two gold medals in the Sixten Jernberg.

After the figure skating competition, Alberto Tomba met Katarina Witt at her dressing room. Tomba, never bashful, said Sunday that "I first enjoyed her artistry on the ice rink, and then

I presented her some flowers in the dressing room." He added: "Language was a problem."

Witt smiled politely as U.S. figure skating

Christa Rothenburger, the East German who was the silver medalist when Blair won the 500 meters, snatched the 1,000-meter gold Friday night with a world record of 1:17.65 seconds. In the previous pairing, Kania, who had set a world mark of 1:18.11 in Calgary Dec. 5, post-ed a momentary world mark of 1:17.70 that bettered Blair's time of 1.18.31. Kania, who had not lost at 1,000 meters since a 1986 meet in Japan, had appeared exhausted after her 3,000-meter race Tuesday. "I think the 3,000 took quite a bit out of her," Blair said. "But she still set a world record here tonight."

For Kania, 26, these two medals, her seventh and eighth in the Olympics, set a Winter Games record for women and men speed skaters. Now in her third Olympiad, Kania has won three golds - at 1,000 and 1,500 meters in Sarajevo, lugoslavia, in 1984, and at 500 at Lake Placid in 1980. She also earned silvers at 500 and 3,000 at Sarajevo, and won a bronze in the 500 here.

Soviets Clinch Hockey's Gold; Sweden Gets at Least Bronze

Compiled by Our Staff From Dispatches

CALGARY, Alberta — The hockey gold medal already wrapped up by the Soviet Union, top-seeded Sweden clinched at least a bronze medal Sunday by rallying for a 3-2 victory over West Germany that eliminated Canada from medal contention.

The Soviet team had won the gold medal Friday night by outclassing Sweden, 7-1. That made the Soviet Union 7-0—it was to play Finland later Sunday in the tournament's final match—the team having overpowered every opponent with an elegant offense made more threatening by a workmanlike defense, Sweden was within 20 minutes of not winning medal before scoring twice in Sunday's third period, the second time when former National Hockey League forward Bo Berglund took Jens Ohling's pass and tapped the puck past goalie Karl Friesen with 6:33 to play.

"I was very worried," said Sweden's coach, Tommy Sandlin. "In ice hockey, it's not always the best team that wins. I thought this might be our time to lose." To get the silver medal, Sweden, the reigning world champion and winner of bronze medals in the 1980 and 1984 Olympics, needed the Soviet Union to beat Finland. West Germany finished fifth.

The Saddledome crowd was on its feet much of the game in support of West Germany, which not only held the key to Canada's medal hopes but included five Canadian natives. Friesen, who made 39 saves, was born in Winnipeg and played in the NHL.

But despite outshooting West Germany by 42-18, the Swedes never had command of the game. West gen scored the twice getting perfect passes from Heimm Steiger to beat goalie Peter Lindmark from short range.

In the second period, the Swedes outshot the Germans, 18-4, but got only a fluke goal, awarded to Hakan Sodergren after his goalmouth pass was deflected past Friesen by teammate Peter Draisaitl. But 29 seconds into the third period, Sweden's Jonas

Bergqvist beat Friesen from in close to make it 2-2. Berghind's game-winner came nearly 14 minutes later. An energetic 6-3 defeat of Czechoslovakia on Saturday afternoon had kept Canada in contention for a medal as Gord Sherven complemented Andy Moog's

The Soviets took a 1-0 lead with their first shot of the game. Vyacheslav Fetisov, the defenseman who reportedly will be rewarded a contract by the New Jersey Devils of the NHL, snapped a shot from the left circle into the net's top right corner 26 seconds into the contest. Fetisov showed he's physical enough to make the transition to the NHL by shoving Michael Hjalm out of his way even as he used his stick like a wand to championship, the Canada Cup and their own Izvestia tournament.

the 7-1 victory over Sweden gave the Soviet Union its gold medal at the Winter Games.

Before the game the Swedes had asserted that their chances were enhanced because they possessed, in Lindmark, a goaltender superior to the undefeated Sergei Mylnikov. But his teammates gave Lindmark little protection, and he was pulled from the net after allowing four goals on 11 shots in the first period.

After Ulf Sanstrom tied the score at 1-1 with a diving shot at 6:46, Igor Larionov, Sergei Yachine and Valeri Kamensky beat Lindmark with goals in less strong performance in the nets by commbuting a hat than a two-minute span. Gold Won, Fetisov Remains Part of Bigger Game

CALGARY, Alberta - Vyacheslay Fetisov, who may become the first major league player from the Soviet Union to join the National Hockey League if rumor becomes reality, is hunched over his stick, which for reasons of his own he wraps in neon orange tape. He idles himself near his blue line, not quite at rest, his eyes fastened on the puck.

The 29-year-old defensemen, the captain of his team, has something mind, something that he does better, according to Wayne Gretzky, the NHL's reigning king, than any other hockey player.

Once the puck drops, Fetisov is off and gliding, pausing only long enough to let his forwards skate into the opponent's zone to cause chaos just ahead of him. Suddenly, before into play, the puck poised at the tip of his stick for just an instant before he buries it in the net

Dmitriev, who has made it clear that the best interests of Soviet hockey and not those of Fetisov are what the exchange hinges on, indi-cated that he didn't expect an immediate resolution.

But he was sympathetic to the complexity of Fetisov's position:
You can have entirely mixed feelings," he said. You want to go and try something new and then realized your playing at a high level at home, that it isn't some sort of street hockey. It's not the kind of decision you make in a week."

On and off the ice, Fetisov can be an expressive man. He was instructed not to speak his mind about his desire to sign an NHL contract until after his team took care of business and won a gold medal here. In compliance, he has ridden alone, sprawled across two seats on the team bus, and has avoided interviews. But he has been his usual distinctive self on the ice, with four goals and nine assists in Calgary.

Renewed Fears on Dollar Make Investors Cautious

By CARL GEWIRTZ

ARIS - A reasonably heavy volume of fixed-coupon Eurobonds hit the market last week. But investor response was lethargic, reflecting renewed wariness about the U.S. dollar, continuing discomfort with the low coupons in the Deutsche mark sector and a sense of complacency about the high-coupon paper.

Dollar investors were jolted last week by comments by the Federal Reserve Board's chairman, Alan Greenspan, that the Fedhad slightly eased credit "a few weeks ago." A few weeks ago, it was widely feared that the United States might be headed toward was widely feared that the United States might be headed toward. a recession early this year in the aftermath of last October's collapse in stock prices.

But the latest U.S. data suggest that those fears were exaggerated and that, at worst, there may be some slowdown in the rate of growth. If there is no tendency toward recession, however, that monetary easing a few weeks ago may be all the fat that's needed to flame the inflation that normally follows a currency devalua-

An early rebound of the U.S. economy may reawaken inflation fears.

There is a significant risk that the easing will prove somewhat destabilizing to the economy," warned Brendan Brown, economist at County NatWest Bank in London. He said he fears an economic bounce-back as early as the second quarter "that may be accompanied by a reawakening of inflation fears."

Initially, the wealth-destroying effect of the October stock collapse was seen as a plus for the United States, leading to a cutback in consumer spending and freeing production for export.

But last week's revision of gross national product for the fourth quarter, showing that it grew at a 4.5 percent annual rate rather than the 4.2 percent rate first reported, indicated that domestic demand was stronger than previously estimated and that exports were increasing more slowly.

"That's a double negative for the bond market," Mr. Brown said. Strong consumer demand would permit foreign producers to raise U.S. prices and not lose much business, giving domestic producers room to raise their prices also. And less rapid growth of exports means less improvement on the trade deficit and thus, probably, renewed pressure on the dollar.

NOTHER negative, Mr. Brown said, is the strong fourth-quarter improvement in gross national product in Japan and the strong Tokyo stock market. "That, added to the fall in oil prices, which particularly benefits Japan, means we could see a new push up of the yen and certainly a reluctance of Japanese investors to return to the U.S. market."

Against this background, investors are exceedingly cautious about buying dollar bonds. And with client business lacking, dealers are unwilling to build large trading positions.

Turnover means profits," said one London banker, adding that if the present conditions persist, a new wave of staff cuts could hit the banks active in the market. "Staff shrinkage doesn't the banks active in the market."

could not the banks active in the market. "Stair shrinkage doesn't create activity," he said, "but it does get you down to the size where you can start making money again."

Among the issues launched last week, Deutsche Bank's $200 million of five-year senior notes had the best reception. The name is a favorite with European investors and the pricing, less the underwriting fees to yield 57 basis points over comparably dated U.S. Treasury paper, was considered fair. The paper, offered at 101% bearing a coupon of 8% percent, ended the week at a discount of 1% points and just inside the underwriting fees of 1% discount of 1% points and just inside the Toyota's three-year maturity had general appeal to those looking for short-term instruments. Nevertheless, the $200 million issue, offered at 101.35 bearing a coupon of 8 percent, ended the week down 11/2 points, leaving it just outside the 11/2 percent underwriting fees.

Ford also tapped the three-year sector, offering $250 million of 8 percent notes at 101%, and finished the week down 1% points, just at the fees paid to underwriters. Although investors continue to value government names, Quebec's maturity of 10 years was a bit long and dealers reported difficulty placing the $200 million issue, which was offered at 100% bearing a 9 percent coupon.

British Telecom's $200 of seven-year notes was a tad too long and a touch too tightly priced, dealers said. As a result, the 8% percent bonds, offered at 101%, finished the week at 99%, just outside the underwriting fees.

The natural alternatives to the dollar market when the currency is suspect are the Deutsche mark and the yen. But not many borrowers are willing to issue yen and the mark has heavy

Générale Allegiance Pledged

Elektrowatt Says It Backs Alliance

BRUSSELS — Switzerland's Elektrowatt SA said Sunday it remained firmly in the camp of a group of French and Belgian com-panies that claims to have a 52 percent majority in Société Générale de Belgique.

That group also sought Sunday to dispet doubts about its claim to have beaten a hostile bid for Générale by the Italian financier Carlo de Benedetti.

Elektrowatt's managing board president, Adolf Gugler, said that no formal accord existed with the French and Belgian group. But he said Elektrowatt had declared its intention to work with the alliance, and the partnership would hold.

Elektrowatt, an energy, industry and services group, holds 4 percent of Generale, Belgium's biggest conglomerate. The alliance is led by the French financial group Compagnie Finan-cière de Suez and the Belgian insurer Groupe AG. Reports on Friday that Elektrowatt was not tied to the alliance by a formal accord led to speculation about the strength of e group's coherence. But Maurice Lippens, managing director of Groupe AG and spokesman for the Belgian wing of the alliance, said, "If we announced what we announced, it's because we have the certainty that we are able to do so." Mr. de Benedetti says he and his allies control 45 percent of Générale's capital and on Thursday doubled his public offer for another 7 percent to 8,000 Belgian francs

($226.6) a share. The six-week struggle for Generale has all but dried up the market in shares and Brussels bourse authorities decided on Friday to suspend trading on the main market until further notice.

Etienne Davignon, a Générale de Belgique director, said all com-panies in the alliance were committed not to sell shares for a period far longer than Mr. de Benedetti's offer, which is to end on Friday.

Dispute Over French Paper Heats Up

By Steven Greenhouse

New York Times Service PARIS - Finance Minister Edouard Balladur may not have realized what a stir he was creating when he provisionally blocked the sale of Les Echos. France's largest financial daily, to Pearson PLC. Last week the publisher of Les Echos turned up the heat even more.

After taking the unusual step of not publishing on Tuesday to protest Mr. Balladur's decision, Les Echos made another unusual move on Wednesday by devoting two pages to respond to his asser-tions that such a purchase by London-based Pearson, which owns the Financial Times, might not be in France's best interest. In unusually blunt language, Jacqueline Beytout, the publisher of Les Echos, declared that Mr. Balladur's decision was "exclu-

What is more, she derided the idea of selling her newspaper to any of the others who have stepped forward since Mr. Balla-dur said last Monday that he was blocking the deal, at least for now. Since then, Robert Maxwell, the British publisher, and Ambroise Roux, a French publishing executive sympathetic to the administration of Prime Minister Jacques Chirac, have shown sively political" and was "in disinterest in buying Les Echos. Mrs. Beytout said she already has a contract to sell her company and believes the contract should be honored. She said she wanted to sell the tabloid, with a circula-tion of 66,000, because her heirs might be forced to dispose of it under pressure in the future to pay inheritance taxes.

In Les Echos, Mrs. Beytout as-serted that Mr. Balladur had no right to block the $150 million sale because Pearson, as a British company, is a European Community company. She said that French law and EC law prohibit governments - except in rare circumstances, such as national se-curity — from blocking the sale of one company in the communi-ty to another company in the community.

In his communiqué, Mr. Balladur declared that "the community character of the Pearson group does not appear durably established today." Several Finance Ministry officials said Mr. Balladur questioned Pearson's community nature because Rupert seek more of that company.

Trade Up 4% in '87 GATT Predicts Further Growth

GENEVA — International trade, led by a sharp rise in shipments of manufactured goods, grew 4 percent last year and is expected to match that in 1988, the General Agreement on Tariffs and Trade said in a report released

The forecast was made "barring a further upheaval in financial markets or a serious recession in the United States," the annual report of GATT economists said.

The 1987 growth of 4 percent in merchandise trade volume was a slight improvement from 3.5 percent growth the previous year. Damage to consumer and investor confidence after the stock market collapse in October appeared less severe than originally had been expected, the report said.

"Developments in world stock markets since October do not seem to have had any immediate adverse effect on world trade," Richard Blackhurst, GATT's chief economist, said.

Moreover, available data suggested that the increase in merchandise trade in the fourth quarter of 1987, which included October, exceeded the average rise for the first three quarters.

The value of merchandise exports last year grew 15.5 percent to a record $2.45 trillion, reflecting an increase in the value of the dollar and higher dollar prices for petroleum and other primary commodities, as well as trade expansion, the report said.

"If 1988 sees progress in reducing the large current account im-balances, there would be an added boost to investor confidence in the functioning of the world economy," the report said in reference to the huge U.S. current account delicit and surpluses in Japan and West

The increase in volume was led by a 5 percent rise in trade in manufactured goods, against 3.5 percent the previous year. Exports of agricultural products rose by an estimated 4 percent in volume, after a 1 percent decline in 1986.

Mutual Funds Struggle To Keep Their Clients

Industry Hopes to Teach Customers That a Mattress Is No Place for Money

Companies are recasting their ad campaigns, retraining their staffs and devising new products to hold on to their customers. Attracting new ones has become a secondary

So far, the industry has no cause for panic, although last week there were reports that Fidelity Investments, based in Boston, was planning major layoffs because of the reduced investor activity since the stock collapse. Fidelity manages about $80 billion in mutual funds, making it the industry leader.

Given the losses suffered in the last quarter, investors have withdrawn surprisingly little money from funds. According to the Investment Company Institute, net redemptions in equity funds on Oct. 19, the day of the market collapse, added up to only about 2 percent of the nearly $800 billion in mutual fund assets at that time. And 80 percent of that activity involved investors switching from equity to fixed-income funds within the same company.

Despite the stock collapse and the severe bond market drop last spring total assets in the industry increased by $53.6 billion from December 1986 to December 1987. But that figure was far below the $220.8 billion increase from December 1985 to December 1986.

The fund industry derives the majority of its profits from management fees, and a much smaller portion from sales charges, so a fall in new business is not fatal. For 1987, the industry earned about $3 billion, according to A. Michael Lipper, president of Lipper Analytical Services. He said it was too early to forecast profit for 1988, but said, "it certainly won't be as good" as in 1987. And the general feeling in the industry is that investors will be back. For one thing, there are limit-ed choices for investors who want to earn more than bank interest. "It's a time when people would prefer to keep their money under their mattresses," said Howard M. Stein, chairman of Dreyfus Corp., which manages about $40 billion in funds, "But under their mattresses, they can't earn the right amount of See MUTUAL, Page 13

Utility Sale

Tests U.K. Program

By Howell Raines

LONDON — Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher's plan to end state ownership of the electrical power system in England and Wales is emerging as a major test of public satisfaction with her policy of privatization. Energy Secretary Cecil Par-kinson on Thursday opened the campaign for legislation to al-low investors to buy control of an industry with $47.5 billion in assets and 147,000 employees. The first House of Commons debate is set for March 9, and the legislation is expected in November and December.

Both critics and supporters of the proposed sale, Mrs. Thatcher's biggest privatization project, were warning that the public would not stand for the kind of transfer of ownership that occurred with two other major utilities, British Telecom and British Gas.

Many analysts say that privatization simply changed Brit-ish Gas and British Telecom from unresponsive public monopolies to unresponsive private corporations with captive markets. Especially with the telephone company, there have been widespread complaints of declining service and allegations that Mrs. Thatcher erred by trying to fix something that was not broken.

In a clear acknowledgment of these criticisms, Mr. Parkin-son stressed that his plan for the electrical service would "put the consumer in the drivcr's scat" by bringing more competition among electricity See PRIVATE, Page 13

The financial year for BBL and its subsidiaries closed on 30 September 1987 with the comfortable profit of BEF4.4 billion (+35%), which marked a continuation of the progress of recent years. This improved result was the fruit of expansion in most spheres of activity, in banking as well as in investment-related services.

The substantial rise in the dividend (+9.5%) has not affected the building up of reserves. The latter have been increased in the aim of fostering the growth of the Bank and reinforcing its financial base through larger shareholders' funds and the making of large-scale provisions. This policy of prudence, which has been pursued for several years, has meant that credit risks on countries whose external debt has been rescheduled are now amply covered.

The return on average equity, which measures the profitability of the Bank, increased to 14.3% in the past financial year as compared with 10% five years earlier. This constant improvement reflects a determined management effort. It testifies to the progress achieved by the Bank in increasing market shares while maintaining strict control over the costs generated by such expansion.

The international climate is less favourable since the stockmarket crisis. There will probably be slower world economic growth. In this changed situation, the central concerns of the Bank's management will be selective expansion through privileging the most profitable sectors of activity, the constant drive to maximize the efficiency of services, and ever vigilant cost control. These priorities should enable BBL to pursue its action on a solid basis in an uncertain

Campeau Victory Expected

NEW YORK — Campeau Corp., the Toronto-based developer, is expected to claim victory on Monday in its struggle for control of Federated Department Stores Inc., the fifth-largest U.S. retailer,

They predict that Campeau will cement its proposed $6.12 billion offer at a Federated board meeting on Monday. The two sides have been negotiating terms of an agreement for submission to the board. Campeau won Federated over on Friday with a sweetened cash offer of $68 a share, $2 higher than a bid made Thursday and $21 higher than its initial offer in January. William Smith, an analyst at Smith Barney, said the latest price was "at the top of the range people realistically expected."

Federated shares rose $1.50 Friday to close at $64.625 on the New York Stock Exchange. Just before Campeau's initial bid, Federated, the parent of Bloomingdale's and L Magnin, was trading around $35

Soviet Loan Signals That Costs Really Are Rising

By Carl Gewirtz

International Herald Tribune
PARIS — Although there has been a lot of whistling in the dark about loan costs rising in the international credit market, bankers last week said the pricing on the new loan for the Soviet Union clearly demonstrated that an upward trend is under way.

But bankers also make a sharp distinction between sovereign and corporate lending, which still commands very low margins. Lending to governments, bankers say, is increasingly less attractive because of the new capital requirements coming into force.

The new banking rules will apply equally to corporate credits. But lending to companies, even if it may not immediately be particularly cost-effective, is seen as opening the way for other, more profitable business - foreign exchange trading mergers and acquisitions that sovereign clients can never of-

"Banks are fed up with low-priced sovereign lending," a British banker said.

The terms on the Soviet loan are still deemed to be "tight," but not so thin as to stir an uproar. Bankers insist that the Soviet Union is still Betting a very good deal, especially since the Japanese banks - which have been the most eager takers of low-cost sovereign debt - will

Those critics maintain that one of Mr. "Selling the State," a leading work Balladur's aims is to sabotage the Les on privatization, said Mr. Parkin-Echos-Pearson agreement so that a compason's approach was a response to my friendly to Mr. Balladur and Mr. Chirac, the "backlash" over the governsuch as the Hachette publishing group, could move in on Les Echos.

Mr. Balladur's office has pointed out that this would be the first French newspaper to be acquired by foreign interests and has questioned whether it would be a healthy precedent. What happens if such Parisian institutions as Le Figaro or Le Monde are bought by foreign interests? it asks. Will France's press become second-class?

In Wednesday's issue, Les Echos noted that the Chirac administration had pushed for a press law restricting purchases by for-eigners but that the law defines foreigners as companies in which more than half the shares are owned by noncommunity members. Again, it argued that Pearson is not a foreign company under that definition.

Mr. Balladur canceled a news conference scheduled for Thursday. Some journalists suggested that he did not want to face the heat over the Les Echos decision. Mrs. Beytout said she did not plan to go to court to try to overturn Mr. Balladur's decision because that could take four years. Les Echos has said that the European Commission, the EC's executive body, is watching the situation and could intervene, espe-cially now that Pearson has appealed to it.

ment's handling of the gas and telephone utilities

Economists and consumer advocates have given cautious endorse-ment to Mr. Parkinson's plan. He "made a promise that we would not get another British Gas or British Telecom, and that has to be applauded," said Jenny Kirkpatrick, director of the Electricity Consumers Council. The heart of the Parkinson plan calls for breaking up the monohibic Central Electricity Generating Board into two major generating companies and to take away from i control of the national grid of transmission facilities. In the future, the power grid will be owned by 12 regional power companies. These companies will also have the right to generate their own electrical power if the two new major generating companies fail 10 provide electricity at competitive

Graham Mather, director of the Institute of Economic Affairs, said giving power-generating rights to the 12 regional companies was "ingenious and imaginative. It has the hallmark of success about it." He said it would provide the competitive element missing in the British Gas privatization

He added, too, that Mr. Parkinson's plan for rebates to dissatisfied customers would prevent the lax service for which British Telecom has been blamed since it went needs. orivate.

therefore, represents a major test.
British Telecom, valued at $4.5 billion, was privatized in 1984, and Debt Swap British Gas, valued at $12.7 billion, in 1986.

Analysts noted that Mr. Parkinson's decision to allow one of the new generating companies to take 70 percent of the CEGB's assets was dictated by Mrs. Thatcher's commitment to nuclear power plants. Only a company of such size could continue operating the financially troubled nuclear power plants and still appeal to stock market investors, they said.

Mr. Parkinson said he would require the 12 regional companies to buy about 20 percent of their electricity from the nuclear plants. The Thatcher government believes that for reasons of national security, the United Kingdom should not be to-tally dependent on fossil fuels for generating electricity.

While Mr. Parkinson was being praised in some quarters for balancing a complex set of political and economic factors, the opposition Labor Party was furious in its denunciation of the plan. John Prescott, the opposition energy sec-retary, said the massive sell-off of public assets was a scheme intended to raise revenues to finance a tax cut for the wealthy.

He also said that the errors of British Telecom and British Gas would be repeated by allowing a shift from a reliable public utility to a set of privileged private companies that are indifferent to public

"It's called oligopoly," Mr. Pres-cott said. "It's called control. It's not called competition." He predicted that the next Labor governcase for electricity," he said, pre-dicting that the Thatcher govern-trical utility. "We want to keep it in public control and public ownership," he added.

Amsterdam

Trading on the Amsterdam Stock Exchange was quiet last week and prices were stable. The ANP-CBS general index finished at 230.6, only slighty firmer than 229.0 the previous Friday.
Volume reached 8.016 billion guilders, against 7.571 billion the previous week.

Publishing stocks attracted considerable interest in connection with developments on VNU's bid for Andet. Philips NV shares hardly moved after its announcement of a 19 percent drop in profit in 1987.

The borkerage firm of Kempen & Co. predicted that this week will be dominated by release of figures by Unilever and Amro bank.

Frankfurt

The West German market was active and enthusiastic last week, as the Commerciank ned 4 dercent to end at 42.1 from the previous Friday.

Factors behind the rise included the dollar's stability, a trend toward lower interest rates and Wall Street's relative firmness, analysts said. Investors were also encouraged by a re-port from Munich's IFO economic research institute noting an improvement in the eco-nomic climate in West German industry.

Volume on the country's eight stock exchanges totaled 17.59 billion DM, against 15.05 billion the previous week.

Auto stocks rose: BMW added 6.50 DM. VW rose 9 DM and Daimler was up 23.50. Banks were popular, as Dresdner added 9.50 DM, Commerzbank, 16.20, and Dentsche Bank, 20.

Dealers said good performances on foreign markets, especially Tokyo, boosted the Hang Seng by 19.13 on Monday, the first day of trading in the Year of the Dragon. Profittaking and uncertainty pushed the index down on Tuesday, but it rose 5 points on Wednesday. Selective buying boosted the market indica-tor Thursday, and bulls on the Tokyo bourse helped fuel a further 28.04 gain on Friday. Average daily volume rose to 564.76 million

London

The London Stock Exchange had a good week. The Financial Times industrial share index ended 41.1 points higher at 1,423.7, as trading levels recovered and the market rose for four consecutive days.

Encouraged by publication of the monthly survey by the Confederation of British Industry, which showed that growth in the British economy had not been affected by October's stock collapse, the market demonstrated its confidence by a marked increase in volume. Hopes that Nigel Lawson, the chancellor of the Exchequer, would announce tax cuts in the budget presentation on March 15 and news of a strong rise in gross national product for the third quarter of 1987 also boosted sentiment.

In the takeover sector, Plessey, a major electrical and electronic manufacturer, was sharply higher on increased demand.

Milan

The Milan market remained optimistic, ending the week with a 4.4 percent use, for a total gain of 16 percent since the year's low on Feb. 9. The Count index finished at 491.74, compared with 471.40 a week earlier.

Analysts welcomed the reversal, but warned of the continuing need for caution. They said that 11 consecutive rises were not enough to indicate a lasting recovery. Volume averaged about 200 billion lire a day, somewhat lower than the previous week. In addition to progress by Montedison-Ferruzzi, rises were posted by some stocks in the de Benedetti group and by the IRI group.

Paris

The Paris Bourse scored a modest gain but profit-taking prevented a larger rise, analysts said. The CAC index rose from the previous Friday's 297.5 to 306.3 on Monday, then finished the week at 305.5.

Analysts said the market had been testing the 300-point level, through which it dropped at the start of November. The lowest level last week was Wednesday's 301.8.

They added that a promising sign is higher volume, exceeding 2 billion francs on some days on the monthly settlement market. Takeovers have continued to boost the market.

Singapore
Share prices dropped in quiet and listless trading on the Singapore stock market.

Trading began on a confident note Monday with investors and speculators back after the Chinese New Year holiday. The Straits Times Industrial Index shot past the 900-point mark, to 901.69, but interest was not sustained for the remainder of the week and the barometer ended at 888.20 on Friday.

Activity centered on Malaysian speculative stocks and less expensive issues, with selective

Volume for the week was 85.5 million shares valued at 150.5 million Singapore dollars.

Tokyo

Prices on the Tokyo Stock Exchange rose for the fifth consecutive week, as measured by the Nikkei average, supported by active buying by institutional and foreign investors.

The closely watched average of 225 blue chips closed Saturday at 25,284.87 yen for a hefty weekly advance of 511.46 yen. It has improved for 13 consecutive sessions, one session short of the 14-day record set in December 1960-January 1961.

Prices advanced in almost all industries, with giant capital stocks, financial issues, and public utilities in the vanguard.

Trading was very active all week, with average daily volume swelling to 961 million shares from the previous week's 751.4 million. The average value of stocks traded rose to 962.2 billion yen a day from 932.44 billion yen.

Zurich

Zurich stocks gained 1.5 percent, as the Credit Suisse index finished at 451.3, against 446.2 the previous Friday, and the Swiss Bank Corp. indicator at 505.0, against 496.9. Zurich prices have now gained 10 percent since the year's low in mid-January. However, volume was light for the week, as the market waited for results of major banks. Analysts advised caution for the next few weeks, as the dollar might not be as stable as it appears.

Bank stocks were strong, as Credit Suisse jumped by 140 to 2,535 francs, and Union Bank of Switzerland rose 90 to 3,200.

Norway Plans to Freeze Wages and Dividends To Revive Economy

Reuters

OSLO - Norway's minority Labor government said it would propose Monday a freeze on wages and share dividends to try to revive the country's sagging oil-led economy. The country is fighting a growing trade defi-cit at a time when the price for its North Sea oil

Prime Minister Gro Harlem Brundtland said Sunday that the freeze would be provisional and would be replaced by income-regu-lating legislation, which she said could be in place from mid-March.

"The details still have to be worked out, but we expect the law to be passed by parliament this week," the prime minister's spokesman, Arne Strand, said.

Legislators widely expected the law to pass even if the Conservatives, the second-biggest party in parliament, do not back the government. Labor usually receives support from the Socialist Left Party, the Christian Democratic Party and the Center Party.

The Norwegian Federation of Trade Unions, the country's biggest labor union, agreed on Sunday to a 5 percent pay raise for its members after the government pledged to try to cut annual inflation to 5 percent from 7 percent by the end of this year.

If the government's efforts on inflation fail. the two sides would, under the agreement, reopen wage negotiations.

Mr. Strand also said that "shareholders' dividends must be in accordance with what the employees receive in pay rises," but he de-clined to say whether dividends would be frozen at 5 percent.

Barbara Hendricks: Ions to 'La Bohème'

D ARIS — While Barbara Hen-I dricks was a junior majoring in chemistry and math at the University of Nebraska, she accepted an invitation to attend a summer music festival at Aspen rather than study complex ion substitution at North Dakota as she planned.

At Aspen she met the mezzo soprano Jennie Tourel who invited her to study at Juilliard, Barbara, who had sung only in choirs except for the occasional "Love Is Where You Find It" at parties, went to Juilliard - but after she had gone back to college and got her degree. She was, she says looking back, meant to be a singer but she wasn't meant to start out

20 years of my life I sang just for the pleasure it gave me without ago by the producer Daniel Tosever thinking I want to be a sing- can du Plantier after a perforer, I want to be a star, I want to bave a success."

Her aims are still not conventional, her intelligence and curiosity are quite particular. "I'm very she says. "I'm in this for myself, for the advancement it can give me as a person, as an

Her notion of selfishness is to please herself by choosing what is difficult. Starting as a singer in the U.S. she emphasized recitals rather than opera and when offered soubrette roles in opera she turned them down although her light soprano and charming presence made her a natural.

"I stayed out of roles that would have me typecast as a soubrette because I didn't want to have to go through the trouble of getting out of them later." Having made a promising start in the U.S. with appearances in and a recording with Georg Solti of David Del Tredici's "Final Alice," the first contemporary work ever to reach the top of the classical charts, she went to Paris in 1977 with a young Swedish musician who became her manager and husband. They live now in Switzerland with a son and daughter aged 6 and 3. She sang Micaela in "Carmen" while six months pregnant with her son.

"I thought that would spice up Micaēla a bit," she says, laughing.

"Now you understand the urgency when she comes with that letter 'my brothers are behind me with their shotguns, come away." Barbara Hendricks is merry, savvy and chic in her jeans and brightly colored shawl confident and in France adored.

The sober magazine Le Monde de la Musique called her irresistible and a pet. She is a Commandeur des Arts et des Lettres, she won top ratings for the popular TV program Le Grand Echiquier although the World Cup was on a competing channel, and she was invited to edit the special Christmas issue of Vogue last year. She was ask to star in the cult film "Diva" and turned it down.

This week she will be seen as Mimi — the first time she has sung the role professionally - in th that aim.

"I like the idea that for the first years of my life I sang just for was suggested to her five years mance of the Brahms Requiem. "I said sure because I figured he says this to every soprano he meets."
For Hendricks, Minn's fragility

is all the more touching because of her vitality. "Normally when you see it on the stage she arrives dying on the table, she is usually played like a wet rag. I was reading a book based on the letters of Eleonora Duse, who also had tuberculosis. It was a part of her life, this illness, she accepted it, she never thought I'm going to die from this, I don't think Mimi thought she would die until she heard Rodolfo say so, until it was put into words that it was really that bad."

Her repertoire is already large but as her voice changes with time —she is now 39 — Barbara Hendricks thinks she may move into what she calls the bigger sisters of her present opera roles — "Maybe the Countess as well as Susanna, or Fiordiligi or Arabella, but still staying with the same circle. I can't see ever going to Tosca or Turandot or Leonora.

"I think that I'm starting to sing with the voice of a woman. I thought I sounded like a boy soprano for a long time." She is not sure that she is ready yet for a role proposed by one of her great champions, Herbert von Karajan, and which she refused: Elvira in "Don Giovanni."

Singer Hendricks: "I'm always on the road to being an artist."

I think must be made evident. She's devoted to Don Giovanni straight through to the end, she tries until the moment he's lost to save him, and yet she's often played as hysterical so that they laugh when she comes in. I'm very young on stage, very ingenue, and I don't know if I have the concentration to surpass my own physical limitations, to play that very complex role of Elvira and keep that nobility and almost inno-cence that she has." Opera is not what she wants to do too much of: "I need the cleansing of recital work." She does not vary her recital repertoire according to the scene - "I sing the same repertoire in a small town as in Vienna, I will never sing down to an audience" - and rather than an accompanist she prefers to work with a solo pianist such as Radu Lupu or Dmitri

'It's much harder. Sometimes

"Elvira can be so ridiculous but it works, sometimes it doesn't, but she has this thread of nobility that I don't need somebody tinkling behind me in the background, need a partner with whom I often share the limelight and the fee."

Her agent points out that having Alexeyev on her forthcoming North American tour means that she will make no money, but Hendricks is stubborn. "I said I know that. I'll make money on something else, but this is what I Wan

In the United States she is less known than in France and her Metropolitan Opera debut as Sophie in "Der Rosenkavalier" in 1986 won only grudging praise from The New York Times. She neither overreacts nor underreacts to critics: "If you read the front page of the paper you realize there's a whole lot else going on,"

Her American career has, she thinks, been slowed by the fact that she is not part of the publici-

"I am probably one of the few, ing.

if not the only, American singers who doesn't have a publicity agent. I don't pat myself on the back for that because I think if I'd stayed in America I would have done like everyone else, but having come here I don't play the game the way it's played there and I'm not going to pay someone to convince a journalist to talk with me. The New York Times reviewer had never seen me on the opera stage before and he hadn't received any input from a publici-ty agent who told him how good I was before I was."

Barbara Hendricks has just agreed to work with the United Nation Commission on Refugees, perfectly aware that she is wanted for fund-raising galas ("Here's my 500 francs and pass me the foie gras please") and fully deter-mined to contribute a good deal more. The UN may not know what it's in for: This is a woman who does wickedly furny impersonations of self-serving opera stars at charity galas and who included in her glamorous special issue of Vogue a letter to Presi-dent Pieter W. Botha on apart-

Perhaps because she knew she could be a doctor or a research chemist if she chose, Barbara Hendricks has none of the per-former's insecurities: "For me succeeding at my life is more important than succeeding at a career, it's always been more impor-tant to me." Her confidence allows her to be generous and patient, which is perhaps something she first learned from Jennie Tourel, who died shortly before Barbara Hendricks's first professional concert. Her daughter is named Jennie and Hendricks sings in recitals the Rachmaninoff songs in Russian that Tourel taught her.

"Arriving in New York I thought I'll give this a try but maybe I should do something a little more useful like being a doc-tor. Being with her I learned the importance of art in life, the importance of serving art and the process of becoming an artist. I mean I never say that I am already an artist because I feel that's the road one has to travel and you don't really arrive until the end. I'm always on the road to being an artist. An artist in wait-

LANGUAGE Buttering Up Some Old Clichés

By William Safire

WASHINGTON — "You pays yer money and you takes yer choice," I wrote recently, using what I assumed to be an old Americanism meaning, as the oddsmakers say, "Pick 'em."

The origin, as dozens of Lexicographic Irregulars stepped forward to say, is British, probably Cockney. The first time the saying saw print was in an 1846 Punch. A cartoon entitled "The Ministerial Crisis" has a showman telling a customer, "Which ever you please, my little dear. You pays your money, and you takes your choice."

The phrase still means "The right of choice is to the buyer," or a more sophisticated "Power belongs to those who have paid their dues," but a much different sense has emerged. "The phrase is used today," writes Edward C. Stephens, dean of Syracuse University's Newhouse School of Public Communications, "not so much as an invitation to choice as it is a rejoinder to complaint. It seems to be similar in intent to You made your bed, now lie in it.' Another variant is 'Look, if you don't like it, you can just lump it."

A third meaning is "Beats the hell out of me."

ET us look at an even older cliche, butter wouldn't melt in her mouth.

This was a predecessor of today's cool, in its sense of "imtouchable by emotion, admirably aloof and fasti-ionably alienated." The saying first cited in John Palsgrave's 1530 book on the French language, gained further currency in Jonathan Swift's writings: "She looks as if butter would not melt in her mouth, but I warrant cheese won't choak her."

In a 1781 comedy by Charles Macklin, the playwright used this expression in the sense it was used for centuries: "She looks demure and good: and is less good and demure than she looks."

The idea behind the phrase is that the person is so cold and proper that her mouth temperature would keep butter refrigerated and firm. In a warmhearted or hot-blooded person, the butter would melt, or at least turn all icky, but the phrase is never used in that form. You never hear someone say, "He's such a compassionate human being that butter would melt in his mouth." The phrase has always been used

In recent years, however, a new sense has developed. threatening to push the old meaning out. This usage has not yet made the quotation books. The phrase now means "eager to please, oleaginous in an attempt to curry favor." It is now used to say, "She's all sweetness and light," as in "Ever since I won the lottery, butter wouldn't melt in her mouth." In this sense, the phrase has lost its etymological moorings, perhaps having sucked some meaning out of buttery, "oily, unctuous," or to butter up, "flatter."

In The New York Times Magazine last April, the writer James Tranb described Francis T. (Mickey) Featherstone, a former gang member, as looking like a cherub: "'If you saw this guy, you'd swear that butter wouldn't melt in his mouth,' says an acquaintance of his. But you'd hear the most horrible stories."

Carl H. Snyder, a professor of chemistry at the University of Miami, who apparently knows the tem-perature at which solids turn to liquids, writes: "Assuming that butter doesn't melt in the mouths of cold-blooded reptiles but that it would flow sweetly in the mouth of a warm and cuddly cherub, it seems to me our first impression of the fellow ought to be that butter would melt in his mouth." The professor adds. "Not until after we had heard all the horrible stories would we expect the stuff to congral."

He has a point, because the meaning has changed.

So when you say, "Butter wouldn't melt in his mouth," you now confuse listeners. You can mean "He's uplight and frigid" in the old sense, or you can mean "He's all peaches and cream," which is the opposite. l'd let that particular cliché die until it sorts itself

WHEN a sitting judge was denied consideration for a place on the Supreme Court because he had puffed a reefer at a party years before. Professor Robert B. Reich at Harvard deplored the "monif straitjacket" implied: "That would limit our selection to only the straitlaced and the goody two-shoes."

U.S. News & World Report, The Christian Science Monitor and sometimes The Associated Press spell that straight-laced; in my book they're wrong, although the new dictionaries now accept that frequent though the new dictionaries now accept that frequent misspelling as a variant.

The confusion of strait and straight is about five centuries old, and it's time to get it straightened out. Strait is from the Latin stringere, to bind; straight is from the Middle English stretchen, "to stretch."

In the King James Bible in 1611, the reader was adjured to reject the wide gate of destruction. The adjured to reject the wide gate of destructions; as cause strait is the gate, and narrow is the way, which leadeth unto life." Unfortunately, this led in an 1842 hymn straight to straight and narrow, leaving meaning and all distinction in dire straits. The Oxford English Dictionary still holds to strait and narrow, but that, not the phrase in current use; it is straight and narrow, with the first word not meaning "tightly bounded" but being the antonym of crooked.

Straitlaced means "proper to the point of prudish."

Charles E. Funk and his son, in "Horsetcathea," linked the figurative use of the term to the literal." The strictures laid upon the body through the tight lacing of the bodice were quickly seen to be closely similar to those laid upon one's conduct through what seemed to be excessive prodishness."

HE History of Goody Two-Shoes," a children's story written in 1765, was about a poor orphin girl who acquires learning to improve her lot in life. Margery Meanwell's brother "had two Shoes but Margery had but one." When given a new pair of shoes, little Margery (I'm gonna cry) "ran out to Mri. Smith as soon as they were put on, and stroking down her ragged Apron thus, cried out, Two-Shoes, Mane see two Shoes' — and by that Means obtained the Name of Goody Two-Shoes."

The name Goody not only suggests a sensingular goodness, but also was the term of civility useful the 16th century, a shortening of Goodwife. The religiblestion goody-goody was used by Samuel Smalles in his 1871 book, "Character," to mean spaniously sandly, and was picked up by politicians in the late 19th century to demonste reformers as goodness these in century to derogate reformers as goo-goos, rocted in goody-goody or — even more densively — good
